“ Scott never hesitated to find humor in even the most bizarre events. He was a loyal friend that stood by his word. His quick wit made a memorable impression and he was so very devoted to his family and friends. Though he called himself a mechanic he was so much more in his daily dealings with contractors and various businesses as he arranged proposals for so many. My heart breaks selfishly at the thought of his absence and I wouldn't trade the time we shared for anything in the world. With deepest sympathy,Rebecca
