“ Our favorite memory of James comes from 1987, the year we moved to the country. We had just tilled our first real vegetable garden, and were laboriously planting flats of seedlings when Herb and James, up from Tennessee, pulled in for a visit. The two men stood there for a moment, shaking their heads and grinning at our clumsy, inexperienced efforts. Then the two strolled casually into the garden, and within a matter of minutes, had rows and rows of vegetable starts planted.

We learned how to work "smart" and not "hard" that day.

Rest in peace, James.

All our love to the Carter Family
