“ It's been 4 months 9 days since your passing and Im just now able to barely write something. I've never felt pain or emptiness like this. Still I can't believe you are gone. I still expect a text or a call but they never come. Life is not the same nor will it ever be. So much grief, saddness, emptiness, unbearable pain for all of us. I'll never understand why you were taken away so young leaving the kids at such a young age. It isn't fair and I can't seem to accept you are gone. I kept telling myself once your autopsy report came back I would accept it then but it is back and I still haven't. So now I tell myself when your headstone is in place then Ill accept it and find some peace but I doubt that too. Your mom is not dealing well and I don't know what to do for her. The house is so quiet, empty, and lonely. Your room is the same. I refused to let anyone change, take, or move anything. The kids need to feel that is still your room so they can feel close to you. I hope you hear me talking to you. Im always asking you to give me a sign. I think I fool myself into believing seeing a cardinal, dragonfly, or butterfly is my sign from you. I hope you are at peace. I hope you and Brandon are kicking it together. I want you to know you were good enough. Always know iloveyou, Ill never forget you and you will always be my best friend. I know one day I'll see you again... Some days I wish it was now! Remember the invisible red thread.

“ Dear Billy, Sandy and Chris, I wish I could take on the sorrow that has filled your hearts with the passing of Timmy. Yes, even as a grown man I still call him Timmy. You all are forever a part of my life and my memories. My best memories of Timmy was how he would aggravate Chris when I came over. He was so silly and sweet. I remember telling Chris to leave him alone and Timmy looking at him with that big ol ear to ear grin that I am almost positive he never out grew. My heart and prayers are with you all. Love, Candi slipped away into the next room. Nothing has happened. Everything remains exactly as it was. I am I, and you are you, and the old life that we lived so fondly together is untouched, unchanged. Whatever we were to each other, that we are still. Call me by the old familiar name. Speak of me in the way you always used. Put no difference into your tone. Wear no forced air of solemnity or sorrow. Laugh as we always laughed at the little jokes that we enjoyed together. Play, smile, think of me, pray for me. Let my name be ever the household word that it always was. Let it be spoken without an effort, without the gloss of a shadow upon it. Life seems all that it ever meant. It is the same as it ever was. There is absolute and unshaken continuity. What is this death but a negligible accident? Why should I be sad if indeed because I am out of sight? I am but waiting for you, for an interval, somewhere near me: the round the corner. All is well.
